

In the novel, several concepts are introduced, such as the ever-present and all-seeing character called Big Brother, the infamous Room 101, the thought police who use telescreens (televisions containing surveillance cameras located in almost every room of the characters' apartments), and the fictional language called Newspeak.